Introduction

Interviewer: Hello,

Guest: yeah, hello

Interviewer: hi, thank you for taking the time to speak with me today. I'm conducting this interview as part of my project on workplace experience onboarding and information systems. So everything you see are here will be for my academic purpose only. So I think it takes around 20 to 30 minutes. If it's that okay with you.

Guest: Yeah, that's fine.

Interviewer: So can I proceed with your permission?

Guest: Yeah, go ahead.

Section A — Role + Company Context

Interviewer: So what is your current job, role or title,

Guest: okay, currently, right now, I'm working as a junior business analysis and my role in the job involves, like, understanding business needs, getting requirement from the stakeholders and help them translate those technical solution. I also support my senior analyst at work to work as a development on project to ensure everything run smoothly.

Interviewer: Okay, so what industry is your company in?

Guest: So my company usually operates in retail, sending, e Commerce Industry. So most of our work focus on improving online customers experience, managing their orders and ensuring smooth operation between the website and internet system.

Interviewer: Okay, so roughly how big is your company?

Guest: So usually my company is medium to large organization. So they are multiple department and they are structure in processes places.

Section B — Work + Onboarding

Interviewer: Okay, so talking about the last time you started a job, so what did the first day or first week your experience?

Guest: Okay, obviously, usually by first days of it is like quite something new and hard for everyone so but usually my company, like for my first few days, it was quite overwhelming, and there was lots of information given in a short period, including the company policies, the tools and the process. I attended several onboarding session, but at the same time, I was expected to start understanding my role. In the first few weeks, I spend most of my time in meetings, reading documents and trying to understand how everything connects. It took time to adjust and feel comfortable.

Interviewer: Okay, so in the first two weeks. So what are the things? Top three things that you need to know about the company,

Guest: on different tracks and learning the company workflows, these are essential, because without them, it's difficult to perform even a basic task efficiently.

Interviewer: So okay, what was the hardest part of getting started, and why it is hardest.

Guest: Usually you are new to the company. It's hard. Hardest pass is like finding information. So everything was stored in different places, like SharePoint, emails and chat tools. It wasn't always clear what to look so, which makes simple talks more time consuming and frustrating,

Interviewer: so you are not unclear about where to look, right?

Guest: Yeah.

Interviewer: So did onboarding feel helpful or like box ticking?

Guest: Mix mix of both. some part were useful, especially the introduction to the company, but other part feels like box ticking. Some training session was too generic and not directly relevant to my role, so I had to learn a lot on my own.

Section C — Finding Information

Interviewer: Okay, so when you need any answers or anything at work. So where do you go first?

Guest: Usually first, I try to check in Microsoft team and some SharePoint first. And if I couldn't find I asked my colleague, I also search two emails if I remember seeing the information before.

Interviewer: Okay, that's great. So how often do you check more than one place? Like, is that annoying about it?

Guest: Yeah, almost everything. It's very frustrating because it's you might start searching in one place. The. Most to another, and sometimes still not find what you need.

Interviewer: So can you tell me about the time that you could not find something important and what happened at the time?

Guest: There are some times like where I couldn't find a key project, documents, and I checked multiple platform but couldn't locate the latest version. This delayed my work and had to have several people before finding it. It showed how intriguing the system can be.

Interviewer: Okay, so, how do you keep track of important links or tags or what's not good about it?

Guest: My I usually try to save link, take notes and use some bookmark pages. However, over time, this becomes messy. It's hard to keep everything organized, and sometimes link becomes outdated, which makes it more unreliable.

Interviewer: So okay, so if you had one home screen at work, what told it is so

Guest: important links, Team updates and contact details, every everything in one place will make much easier to stay organized and productive.

Interviewer: Okay, so what is the information you should be? Like should be quick to reach.

Guest: So your first thing is like your Delica, which is like, frequently used document as a key contact. Like should be accessible within a few clicks, because they are usually correct.

Interviewer: Yes. So how do you know that the information you get is correct or update?

Guest: What I usually do is like, I check the last update, like, update that or confirm with my colleague. However, this isn't always reliable, so having a verified system will be much better.

Section D — Starting a Job

Interviewer: Okay, so on the first day. So what will have made you feel less lost?

Guest: I would say, like a clear checklist or type will have helped a lot. Sometimes that show what to do step by step will make the first day less confusion.

Interviewer: Okay, so in the first week, did you know what to do each day?

Guest: Not always. Sometimes I wasn't sure what to prioritize, and I asked to ask Structure Plan is usually help you to make things much clearer.

Interviewer: So what makes onboarding feel personal and useful.

Guest: Onboarding like it feels more useful when it's like tailored to the role practical examples and real talks have more and general information interacting training is also effective.

Interviewer: So what made you feel like you were on track?

Guest: Obviously like when you're when you get a feedback from your manager and completing small class, you get a confidence when you have a regular check. And also made a big difference

Interviewer: so when you need any help, so whom did you did you know whom to have?

Guest: busy with your own work. So it's not always here this cause delay, and sometimes we delay and sometimes more and more stressful.

Section E — AI Helper Trust

Interviewer: Okay, so now talking about AI chat, GPT or anything, any tools have you ever used at work, or have you ever used at work and it was good or bad?

Guest: Yeah, now, living in an AI world. Like, obviously, everybody does use some AI tools, okay, they are quite helpful for quick answers, but sometimes this information is not accurate or detailed enough. Yeah.

Interviewer: So what do? What would you make you trust an AI tool?

Guest: Like, I would trust it more if it shows sources like explains where they can save and provide links to official documents and where it is like transparency.

Interviewer: So again, like vice versa question. So, what will you make you not trust the AI tool?

Guest: Me, if the answer are incorrect or outdated, explanation also reduce the trust.

Interviewer: So what questions you like? What questions should AI not answer about like?

Guest: It will be like kind of like HR issue, like about sensitive topic, personal concern, or some important decision, which will be always handled by women.

Interviewer: So would you worry about any privacy of the company?

Guest: that I would feel more uncomfortable if they were clear data protection policies.

Section F — Wrap-up

Interviewer: So what were the top two problems you like mentioned today?

Guest: So today it was like, Yeah, difficulty in finding information, which usually happens every day, and like, it's like, lack of structure, onboarding.

Interviewer: Okay, so what do this problem trust you?

Guest: Obviously, it's like you sometimes delay your work, you get your which increase your stress, and sometimes, like when you put all your phone and when it's beautiful design over all productivity.

Interviewer: So if you could change any one thing, so what would it be?

Guest: Sometimes, I think like I would have created a centralized dashboard where all inform important information, tasks and tools are available in one place, which could make my work much more efficient and reduce confusion.

Closing

Interviewer: Thank you for your time. These were my questions. Hope you felt comfortable doing the interview

Guest: No worries. I hope I answer your question.

Interviewer: I'm very thankful to you to give me your valuable times.

Guest: Thank you. I'm always there. If you have any confusion, you can still call me. Okay. Thank you. Bye.
